Debaltsevo Remains Flashpoint as Ceasefire Takes Effect

by Will Ritter
w.ritter@eavex.com.ua

NEWS

The “Minsk 2” ceasefire agreement for Ukraine’s Donbass region went into effect on Sunday morning (Feb 15), with reports stating that the truce is largely being observed along the line of contact in both Donetsk and Lugansk provinces. The Ukrainian and pro-Russian separatist sides in the conflict now have until midnight tonight (Feb 16) pull back their artillery from the front lines to create a 70-km wide buffer zone. However, the ceasefire does not specifically mention the flashpoint of Debaltsevo, which is a Ukrainian-controlled enclave inside separatist-held territory, with several thousand pro-Ukrainian troops inside. DNR separatist president Alexander Zaxarchenko said that since Debaltsevo is not on the front line but inside DNR territory, the ceasefire does not apply there, and OSCE monitors have thus far been unable to reach the area.

COMMENTARY

We see the Debaltsevo issue as similar to the situation at Donetsk Airport, which took on a symbolic significance as the pro-Ukrainian side desperately defended it for several months before finally being pushed out. In both cases, the Ukrainian side appears to be obsessed with military symbolism at the expense of more practical considerations such as saving its soldiers’ lives and economizing financial resources in order to defend against a much wider advance westward by the Russian-backed separatists. The danger at Debaltsevo is not that Ukraine loses control of it (we see this as inevitable), but that fighting there could take down the entire ceasefire and result in a quick resumption of full-scale war. Such a resumption in fighting is probably the goal of the Kremlin, and as long as there remains an influential faction in Ukraine’s political elite which favors launching a military offensive to recapture the DNR/LNR territory, Moscow and their proxies will have a willing partner in their efforts to keep the conflict hot. We think that with Minsk 2, the European Union has made its final major effort to stop the fighting, and that if the agreement breaks down (the deal’s point about Kyiv regaining control of the pre-2014 Russia-Ukraine border looks particularly problematic), the focus of Western support for Ukraine will likely shift to Washington, where hawkish calls for arming Kyiv have been competing with voices who say that Ukraine’s military apparatus is simply too corrupt and incompetent to be trusted with weapons supplies.

Mriya Creditors Have Effectively Transferred Ownership from Guta Family

by Ivan Dzvinka
i.dzvinka@eavex.com.ua

NEWS

A Cyprus court has appointed an unspecified “temporary director” to insolvent Ternopil-based crop grower Mriya Agroholding, Interfax reported on Friday (Feb 13) citing the creditor committees of the company. The temporary director is obligated to act in the interest of the creditors. Creditors said this move was made to simplify the process of transferring the ownership in the company from its former owner, the Guta family, to the de-facto new owners, the creditors. The temporary director has delegated full responsibility for managing Mriya to a team of executives who were in recent days appointed by the creditors.

COMMENTARY

This technical move is encouraging for Mriya, as it increases the chances that the spring planting campaign will be conducted. As far as we are informed, the company’s CEO under the Guta family, who only recently were supposed to leave the post, was doing nothing to prepare the for the planting. However, the question remains open whether the creditors will be able to find a consensus on keeping the company as a going concern. As we wrote before, some of the creditors favor a liquidation of Mriya as the best way of recovering their investments.
